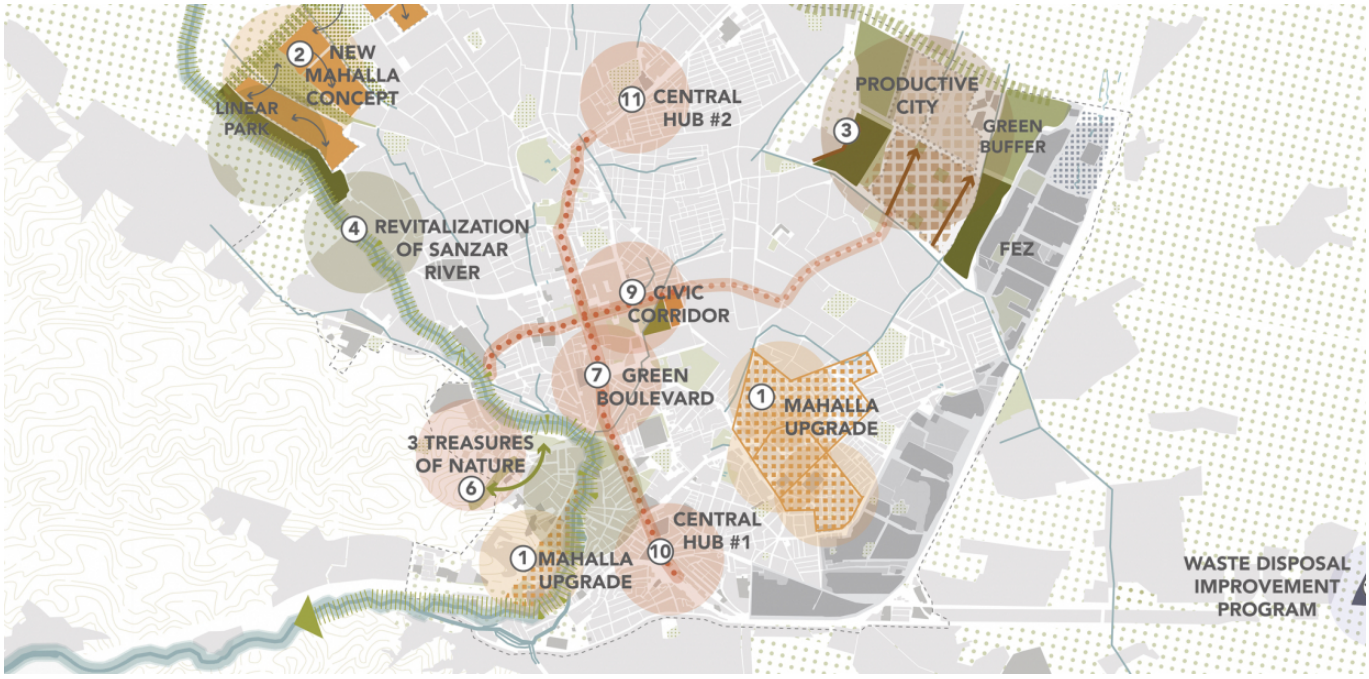
Economic development through urbanization in Uzbekistan



Uzbekistan considers the further development of its cities as a key to economic growth. It has therefore decided to encourage more people to relocate to cities. Working together with the Vienna-based Superwien and Tashkent-based IKS, we carried out urban economic analyses to support the development of suitable strategies for two regions and the cities of Jizzakh, Yangiyer, and Havast. The development strategies also include proposals for city expansion using a novel interpretation of the traditional mahalla district pattern.
